ADVANTAGE CREDIT CO-SPONSORS ORIGINATORPRO MORTGAGE SCHOOL

CLEVELAND, OH, June 17, 2002— Advantage Credit announced today its co-sponsorship of the OriginatorPro Mortgage School—a program that trains loan officers and operations personnel in the mortgage origination business around the U.S.

The program provides an intensive, 3-day course that starts with the basics of the origination process, including credit report review, qualifying borrowers, developing a client list, and available loan programs. It then takes participants through a more thorough understanding of real estate finance techniques, with tutoring on subjects ranging from secondary markets and FHA processes to refinancing methods.

Advantage Credit, as a co-sponsor of the school, provides materials, financial support and instructions on using its leading web credit reporting system, Online Services, or its dial-up software credit system, WinACI, including sample credit reports and free access to Advantage Credit's demonstration accounts for hands-on learning.

“We are pleased to be benchmarking how a credit reporting vendor should perform with the school's students,” said Julie Jordan, V.P. of Marketing for Advantage Credit. “Not only can we help train new brokers through a quality program, but we can train these brokers about what their minimum expectations should be in the credit reporting arena in terms of speed, ease and readable report formats,” she concluded.

“Advantage Credit adds a high quality component to our program,” said Dave Hershman, Lead Instructor for the OriginatorPro school, and also a renowned industry speaker and writer with six published texts and a columnist for the Mortgage Press. “Credit reporting is a very key element of the loan process, so we recommend Advantage to our students because of their solid system and service,” he continued.
