CLEVELAND, OH, June 17, 2002— Advantage Credit announced today at the NAMB 2002 Annual Convention the company's integration with Realec, a technology platform that provides broad integration between loan originators and service providers.

"Both Advantage Credit and Realec value meeting originators' technology and service needs quickly," said Lance Forchilli, V.P. of Business Development for Advantage Credit. "Interfacing with Realec gives us another widely-used industry network through which we can expand services to brokers," he continued.

Advantage Credit serves the credit reporting needs of over 5,000 mortgage originators through Online Services, the company's web-based credit reporting system, and through WinACI, a Windows-based system. The company's clients include some of the nation's largest mortgage brokerages, including Allied Mortgage and Carteret Mortgage. Advantage Credit interfaces with all popular origination software packages, as well with Ellie Mae's ePASS system and the Myers Internet system.

"We're very pleased about this collaboration with Advantage Credit," said Jeff Sanderson, president of Realec Technologies. "They are a well-established leader of credit reporting services and solutions to mortgage brokers, and Realec's enabling technology provides Advantage Credit's customers a ready virtual network of service providers," Sanderson said.
